

The Forty-One Times

Veritas et Vox Insularum Jeju et Oji

by Swiderr

Mysterious Activity Around The Toy Factory in Gu-Jwa

Locals in Gu-Jwa have been seeing fully blacked out Muhans driving around the toy factory late at night. Mysteries evolve among the local population and stories are passed on from house to house on what could possibly be happening inside. Some local teens have been walking around the area late at night hoping to get a glimpse of what's going inside, all they have been able to see are men in black uniforms acting suspicious. Sometimes trucks pull up and materials are loaded in to the back and off they go, under escort of these blacked out vehicles. People wonder if it may be related to the Department of Defense or if it has something to do with the things going on around the 41 Cult scene.

Questions from local residents have reached the town hall, but no definitive answer has been given from authorities.

Residents have thought about taking matters in to their own hands, trying to photograph the trucks and cars and even sending drones towards the Toy Factory to see what the fuzz is about, eventually ending up with a jammed and broken drone and more mysteries to resolve.

In response to growing concern, the 41PD stated that it has monitored the 41 Cult in the past and will continue to do so going forward, with the goal of identifying and stopping any illegal activity as early as possible.

by Giorgio

41 Mobile Fuelers Take Matters Into Own Hands

Oji Island is known for a more remote place, with lots of desert, mountains, but also forests and these lovely small villages. One of the down sides of a more remote place is the inability to get fuel everywhere. With the increased roadside assistance provided by B.A.S.E.41 and local companies due to motorists stranded with an empty fuel tank, has caused outrage with the community. Locals have asked for more fuel stations, but authorities stated that they have trouble with freeing up budget to do so.

Within a week, the folks of Oji Island saw these beautiful rigs down the road, chrome shining- a big 41 on the side and happy truckers honking to the kids at the edge of the road!

"The people asked, we delivered!" a spokesperson of 41 Mobile Fuelers said, who is now the key to get fuel in the most remote places. Residents have praised 41 MF and said that this is exactly what makes a community, a community!

by attodeth

Is 41FD Getting Revived?

With 41 Fire Department halting operations a few months ago, the question arose among the public if it had anything to do with budget cuts or, as the officials said, "the fire protection is sufficient and under full protection".

Lately residents have been complaining to officials about the increase in wildfires, some even claiming that the fires are caused by arsonists. 41PD and voluntary firefighters have launched an investigation on this claim, but so far 41PD cannot confirm or deny of any wrongdoing with these fires.

One of the voluntary firefighters is; Bram. Bram takes fire prevention very seriously and since the halting of operations of 41FD he has seen these vehicles collect dust, fire houses being closed and residents starting to worry. He explained that over the last months of 41FD not being present anymore, he has informed the public as best as he can about fire prevention.

What to do in case of a house fire, how to take precaution and even going house to house to check people's smoke alarms.

We asked him for his plans in the future, "My goal is to re-live 41FD on a voluntary basis, so protection can increase but budget stays low".

Authorities have been going over this idea and so far no guarantee is made.

Let's hope we see these bright red trucks back on the streets soon!

by Bram

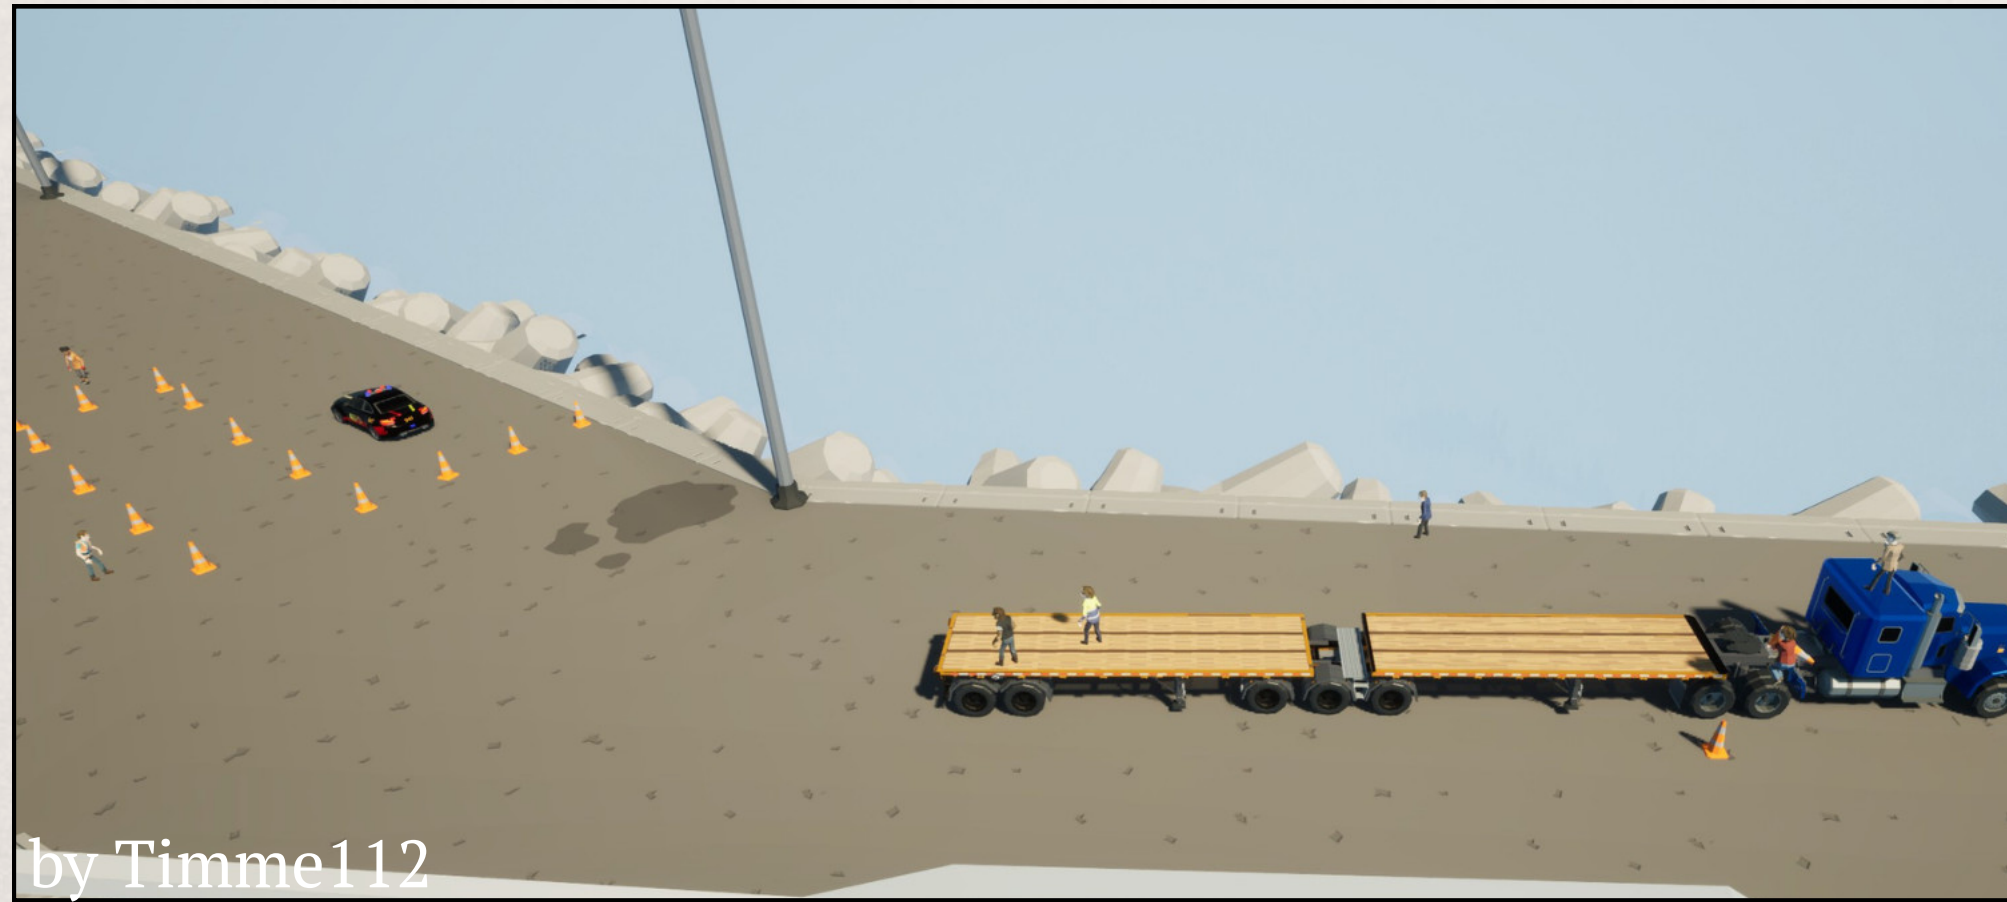

by RandomDude

The Forty-One Times

Veritas et Vox Insularum Jeju et Oji

Semi-Truck School: Cones, Control, and a Fun

by Timme112

The operation zone looked like a proper training yard. Cone built mini tracks were laid out with tight gates, awkward offsets, and turns that punish sloppy trailer angles. From the first arrivals it was clear this was not a casual meetup. This was a semi only class, built to teach real control.

After everyone parked up, the Professor ran a quick theory and terminology round, then the group moved straight into practice. Drivers tackled multiple cone courses with one, two, and even three trailers. The difference showed fast. Some could drive a semi, others could place it. Every clean pass drew nods. Every cone tap brought that quiet moment of yep, felt that.

Organizers tracked results throughout, because there was more than bragging rights on the line. The best student earned a prize run. Four coils to deliver at Jeju Harbor, trailer provided. The win came down to discipline. Zero cones hit across tracks, or the lowest count, with rules respected.

Then came the surprise. Forge, the Professor, has apparently shelved the entire Driving School project again, despite the huge success of the first session. The reasons remain unclear. Whether it was the flood of positive feedback, or the stress of planning and running a three hour training event, nobody seems to know.

The official Drivers Association for Transport Safety, based in Jeju City, expressed regret over the decision and is watching closely to see whether a successor will step in and keep the school alive.

by Timme112

Increased Military Presence

Residents of Jeju have seen an increased activity around the General Diallo Military Base.

Local authorities have been questioned about this increased presence and if there is any need to be alarmed for drastic world events since world economics and politics are taking a toll on everyone.

Residents have been made sure that there is no need to be alarmed but that the military structure is undergoing a complete overhaul. "General Diallo Military Base", formerly known as "Camp Jeju" has been re-assigned from a training facility to an active military logistics base. Over time more soldiers will be assigned to this base and residents will see an increased population of military vehicles driving around the islands. Residents have reported seeing trucks with blue crates on the back, driving around under escort of Military Police. The Base Commander has spoken to several residents assuring that logistics are taking place and will be done under protection, adding to that statement that by delivering these, the Department of Defense will contribute to the local productions.

by GoatNine

Traffic Causes Mayhem at Olle Speedway Intersection

The intersection next to Olle Speedway is a busy intersection connecting three key points, West-Jeju, Central-Jeju and Oji Island. Motorists have complained to the Department of Transportation about the lack of movement at this intersection, one driver adding "Last week I've sat here for forty-one minutes before reaching the intersection". The City Council of Jeju has been thinking about a proper way to tackle this intersection. Perhaps a traffic warden would suffice, should we place traffic lights or completely overhaul the intersection to a roundabout. Budget is an issue, the council stated. Motorists are fed up with the situation and dangerous driving becomes normal.

by KailSned

by ROZ-221

Photo of the day